

Reassessment Policy

Introduction

From time to time learners may not reach the required standard to achieve a pass in an element of a course or qualification. Survive and Save Training is committed to providing opportunities for all learners undertaking training courses with us to be reassessed within a reasonable time.

Tutor Assessed Qualifications

- This policy covers all qualifications that are assessed by the programme tutor or other internally appointed assessor regardless of the awarding organisation.
- During the course/programme learners will have been advised of the assessment criteria including when these elements need to be completed and marked. Full details of the assessment criteria will have been given to each learner on the first day of the course.
- Learners who complete assessment tasks and activities during the course but have not achieved a pass initially will be able to discuss this with their tutor and be able to resubmit work during the course. Where the work has still not achieved the required standard the qualification result will be referred and an application for reassessment will be required.
- Where assessment tasks and activities have not been completed within the agreed timeframe it will result in the qualification being referred and an application for reassessment will be required.
- If revised submission dates have been agreed that are beyond the last date of the course the learner must submit the required work to the tutor for assessment by the required date. Where the work reaches the required standard to pass the learner results will be updated and submitted. If the work is still referred or not submitted the learner will need to apply for reassessment.
- Where the programme requires completion of assessment tasks and activities in the workplace they will be allowed to resubmit referred work on 1 occasion after which they will need to apply for reassessment.
